Our News in Brief

A snapshot of some of our main activities during the past three months

Our New Report Highlights Key Factors Behind Declining Vaccination Uptake

We published a new report on the changing attitudes to vaccination in Devon, Plymouth & Torbay. The findings confirm a concerning trend of declining uptake among at-risk groups across the area, raising important public health questions.

The report, based on a combination of face-to-face and online surveys, was produced by Healthwatch to understand why widespread access to vaccination services is not translating into higher uptake, particularly among those most vulnerable.

Key Findings

The investigation highlights several consistent themes contributing to vaccine hesitancy and refusal:

- Vaccine Fatigue: A clear expression of weariness among the public regarding repeated vaccination programmes was a prominent factor in declining uptake.
- Concerns about Side Effects: Many respondents cited worries about potential side effects as a primary reason for refusal.
- Mistrust of Programmes: The report notes expressed mistrust of the vaccination programmes themselves among a segment of the population.

However, the findings also provided important positive feedback, noting high levels of procedure satisfaction and widespread praise for the healthcare staff delivering the vaccinations, indicating that issues lie primarily with public perception of the programmes rather than the service delivery experience.

The full report, including detailed observations and Healthwatch's recommendations for system partners, has been shared with NHS Devon to help inform future public health campaigns and service planning.

NHS Devon has provided a response to the report, acknowledging the findings and committing to use the insights on vaccine hesitancy to refine their future communication strategies. They confirmed that it will be integrating the report's key themes—such as addressing vaccine fatigue and concerns over side effects—into its planning for upcoming vaccination seasons.

Furthermore, NHS Devon continues to actively encourage uptake through various channels, including advice via GPs, vaccination centres, community pharmacies, and local outreach pop-up clinics. Visit <http://www.nhs.uk/flu vaccine> for more.

Our Chair Dr Kevin Dixon

"Our role as Healthwatch is to ensure that the voices and experiences of local people are heard by those who plan and deliver care. This report clearly demonstrates that the reasons for declining vaccine uptake are complex and multi-faceted, going beyond simple availability.

"We heard expressions of understandable vaccine fatigue, concerns over side effects, and, in some cases, mistrust. For vaccination programmes to be successful, health services must listen to these insights and tailor their communications and approach to address these genuine user concerns directly and transparently. We are presenting our recommendations to NHS Devon to ensure these findings lead to positive changes for the community."

Healthwatch Network News

A snapshot of some of our national partner Healthwatch England's news, briefings and reports during the past three months

About Healthwatch England

Healthwatch was established under the Health and Social Care Act 2012 on a national and local level. Healthwatch England (HWE) are a statutory committee of the independent regulator the Care Quality Commission (CQC). HWE escalate local Healthwatch concerns to CQC and provide advice to the Secretary of State for Health and Social Care, NHS England and local authorities. There are 152 independent local Healthwatch set up across each local authority in England.

Healthwatch England Key Reports and Briefings this Quarter

New Trans & Non-Binary Report – A Healthwatch England survey of 1,393 trans and non-binary adults found that only 53% rated their GP practice as good for general care, compared to 74% in the national average. Of respondents, 40% had formally changed their gender marker on NHS records. Among these, 28% lost access to previous records, 18% were misgendered in communications, 16% experienced disrupted prescriptions, and 13% faced disruption to ongoing care. Additionally, 21% said the NHS stopped providing sex-based care such as cervical screening after their record change. CLICK HERE for full findings on the Healthwatch website.

Healthwatch Launch Campaign to Protect Independent Public Voice – The Local Healthwatch Network has announced the launch of a new campaign to advocate for the preservation of an independent public voice in health and care – which includes the launch of a national Government petition to review their decision to abolish local independent services that speak up for the public. Healthwatch in Devon, Plymouth & Torbay have joined this campaign, and we remain committed to championing the needs of our diverse communities to ensure local voices are heard in health and care decisions. Men would come forward for prostate cancer screening – New research from Healthwatch England reveals strong public support for a national prostate cancer screening programme, suggesting the NHS would be “pushing at an open door” if one were introduced. Overall, 79% of men said they would attend a screening appointment, rising to 81% among Black men, who face double the risk of prostate cancer. Healthwatch is urging policymakers to consider men's views alongside clinical and economic evidence when deciding on future screening plans. They also call for clear national guidance for GPs and the public on PSA testing rights for asymptomatic men aged 50+, to reduce confusion and distress. Impact : Breaking down NHS waiting lists to tackle inequalities

Healthwatch England, using feedback from people across the country – including Devon, Plymouth, and Torbay – successfully campaigned for NHS England to publish demographic breakdowns of waiting list data to tackle health inequalities. Their research showed that women, ethnic minorities, disabled people, and those in deprived areas often faced longer waits and poorer experiences. As a result, NHS England began publishing data by age, sex, ethnicity, and deprivation for the first time over the summer. Healthwatch now continues to campaign for further expansion to include disability and caring responsibilities.

Citizens Assembly: Health Focus

In September Healthwatch Torbay hosted the Torbay Citizens Assembly Open Meeting. It successfully brought together residents and health leaders at Paignton Library to focus on local health and wellbeing. The aim was to gain a deeper understanding of Assembly Members' approach to keeping themselves healthy now and in the future.

Five speakers, including our Chair Dr Kevin Dixon and Public Health Consultants, presented on strategic shifts such as moving care into communities, the South Devon Healthy Ageing Partnership, and leveraging digital tools like the NHS App. The presentations underscored the urgent challenges facing coastal areas, advocating for prevention and resilience.

Two workshops gathered valuable feedback. Workshop 1 identified four core areas for wellbeing: Physical Activity (e.g., walking, swimming, gardening), Social Connections (volunteering, classes), Mental Agility, and Creativity.

Workshop 2 provided detailed suggestions for providers across key themes. These included making face-to-face GP consultations a priority, standardising access across surgeries, improving public transport links (specifically direct buses to Exeter Hospital), and delivering clearer, non-vague communication. The suggestions highlighted the need for integrated hospital and GP systems and a desire for feedback on how member views influence decisions.

The event successfully captured practical, actionable feedback for decision-makers. A video recording of the day is available here: Video of the Torbay Citizens Assembly Open Meeting.

Healthwatch Case Studies

Your experiences of local health and social care in your words

This page shows a case study this quarter from each of Devon, Plymouth and Torbay, related to the feedback analysis on the previous pages. PLEASE NOTE: All client's names and photographs have been replaced to protect their identities.

Medication Management Concerns Resolved

Colin in Torbay, who manages a long-term mental health condition, shared concerns about the removal of medication from their repeat prescription list. This happened after they sourced an extra supply due to a national shortage, which they believe was misinterpreted as misuse. Key issues included a lack of clear communication about the prescription change, leading to patient anxiety, and an increased burden on their carer due to the GP advising two trips per week (one to request, one to collect) for weekly prescriptions. The patient also felt unjustly accused of misusing their medication.

What we did – We escalated the concerns to the Torbay GP Practice. This led the practice's lead pharmacist to contact the patient directly to discuss the situation, resolve the underlying issues, and restore effective prescription management.

Care Funds Access Reinstated

Judith in Devon was receiving 20 hours of partially-funded care and reported significant stress due to being unable to access their prepaid care card since early July. A technical password issue prevented access, and without the funds, the individual had been paying carers from their personal, unsustainable bank account. They experienced a complete lack of support and communication from the card provider, and a promised follow-up from the local authority's finance team never happened, causing rising anxiety and a fear of care disruption.

What we did – We contacted the relevant teams on the individual's behalf, confirming that their care account had been successfully transferred and was functioning correctly, allowing payments to resume. We advised the client on how to activate their new card and provided contact details for further support. We also noted that the local authority is preparing a formal complaint about the wider system outage.

Impact : We regularly share all of your stories and our intelligence with key stakeholders, including health & social care providers & commissioners, the Devon Integrated Care Partnership Board, our local authorities, Local Care Partnerships and the voluntary sector. We also share our data with the Care Quality Commission and Healthwatch England to help address health and care issues at a national level.
